A Pardon for a Pistol.

A few days ago a very interesting scene took place at the usual crowded reception of the President. Applicants were approaching Mr. Johnson, each with his case ready; after briefly stating which, and a record being made of it by the private-secretary, way was made for athers. In the line was Mr. Banks, an enterprising young merchant of New York, and his friend, Mr. Kewan of Patershurch a leading will Mr. Kervan, of Petersburgh, a leading miller, who applied for pardon, coming, as he did, within the twenty thousand sand dollar or thirteenth clause of the amnesty proclamation. As soon as the President saw Mr. Banks he recognized him, asking him his business, and hearing that it was to ask a pardon for Mr. Kermer heart and the same asking him his business, and hearing that it was to ask a pardon for Mr. Kermer heart and the same asking him his business, and hearing that it was to ask a pardon for Mr. Kermer heart and the same asking him his business, and hearing that it was to ask a pardon for Mr. Kermer heart and hear van, he took a note of it, and told him, smilingly, he would hear from him in the morning. The reason why the President recognized the young New Yorker is best explained by the following short narrative: In April of 1861, after the Senate of the United States had adjourned, Mr. Banks was going from Washington to the South, on the railroad running by Gordonsville and Petersburg. At his side was a very pleasant person, who conversed freely on the different topics of the hour, and finally asked him to change a $2.50 gold piece, which he did. When the cars stopped at Gordonsville there was a great and excited crowd assembled. They at once demanded and sembled. They at once demanded, and sent some of their number into the train to see,"whether Andy Johnson was on board!"
"Lets hear from him!" "Drag him Chase's connection with it, are the founded. The Chief Justice has very properly declined all conference on the subject, and it is not at all likely that he will hold any Court in Virginia of North Carolina, until after Congress shall have had an opportunity of legislating in regard to the Circuits in the rebel States. And in this dignified position we States. And in this dignified position we said, "to my nome at Greenville, Tenn." I said we got off from those gentlemen, "Governor," said Banks. "I am sorry," said Johnson; "I wanted to tell them what I thought of secession." Mr. Banks then asked the Governor if he was armed.

"Our schools and the distribution of clothing will be increased, but measures were adopted looking to a more thorough and systematic prosecution of our distinctively religious efforts. Those best acquainted with the peculiar difficulties, as quainted with the peculiar difficulties, as well as encourgements, attendant upon religious culture of this people, will, we think, best appreciate the fitness of this portion of our plans. They embrace three classes of workers: First, the pious teachers, as heretofore; second, female 'smily mission-aries, to go from house to house, reading the Scriptures and giving instruction in practical, personal, domestic and social religion—the religion of every day life—the kind of instretions, we are persuaded, most needed by the people; third, missionaries, who shall be pastors of our teachers, as well as of the people, and aid and chear them in their daily duties; watch over the Sabbath-schools, assist the female missionary; distribute the Scriptures, preach the Gospel, organize churches (as far as practicable,) and furnish instruction, academic and theological, to colored ministers, and candidates for the ministry—this last becandidates for the ministry—this last being a kind of labor much needed and most

It ap-pears that this prelate recently occupied the pulpit of the Congregational Church at Rye Center, and preached in his usual dress, without either gown, robe or stole; gave out a hymn from the Presoyterian collection; and repeated a mutilated ver-sion of the morning prayers, omitting the Absolution, Psalter, Litany, Collects, Epistle, and creed. The service occupied twenty-one minutes, and the sermon fiftyfive. The indignant writer claims not to be bigoted or intolerant, but still charges the diocesan with a violation of his oreination vows, and suggests to him "to come honestly forth and resign the high privileges which he has ceased to value. A New Plan for Bassing the Atlantic

Louis Olin writes to the London Morning Star: "After the return of the Great Rastern I conceived a plan for fishing out the cable. I submitted it to some friends of mine, among whom was a scientific gentleman. They found it so practicable that they advised me publish it. I proposed to start three ships instead of one, each ship having a wire rope of great strength attached to the stern, of at least three miles in length. At the end of this rope I would attach a thick ring weighing several hunin length. At the end of this rope I would attach a thick ring weighing several hundred pounds, through which the end of the cable at Valentia should be passed; the ships would then be obliged to follow the cable, as the least deviation would be indicated by the angle described by the ropes. The ships would be from two to three miles apart, the Great Eastern in the middles and when within ten or fitteen miles. dls; and when within ten or fifteen miles dle; and when within ten or fifteen miles from the broken cable, would, by a signal from the Great Eastern, stop and begin the winding up. When the cable is raised a mile high, the first and third ships should stop, leaving the Great Eastern to finish the work. By this means the slack of at least six or seven miles of the cable would be available to raise it to the surface of the sate over if the doubt wars two miles." water, even if the depth were two miles."

Du-rant, or other vile spawn of impotent am-bition and stipended fanaticism has, as yet, dared desecrate our soil, and whisper, from their hiding places, the signal for the most their hiding-places, the signal for the most terrible of civil wars, the war of races—a war at which humanity will shrink with horror, but in which the vastry superior numbers, the superior genius of the white race would be driven, in self-defence to the stern work of extermination.
